

Quarantine Theatre: Grania McFadden

Something a Taxi Driver in Liverpool Said, Quarantine Theatre, The Summit

IT takes the light from the sun eight minutes and 30 seconds to reach the earth - and that's exactly the same length of time it takes to experience this special piece of theatre.

From the moment you enter the auditorium to the time you step back into the outside world, Renny O'Shea's magical journey will take you far away from the madding crowd.

To describe what happens would be to cheat anyone who is planning to go. I will tell you that each person travels alone. Don't worry, it's fine.

Every show is different — the experience is what you make it, and you choose your destination. Each traveller moves — like the earth — from darkness into light, and almost all five senses are employed during the trip.

I know, you're none the wiser. All I can say is that eight minutes has never passed so quickly, and the only downside of this emotional, beautiful and peaceful production is that it comes to an end.

Some theatre celebrates language, while some relies on visual impact. This very special production is theatre for the soul.
